Forecast For Southwest England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Sunday 10 Jan 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Becoming milder and turning unsettled on Monday.

Today:
A frosty start with some morning fog patches. Remaining largely dry throughout the day with sunny spells. However, a chance of a few scattered showers in the north and west during the afternoon. Becoming milder. Maximum temperature 8 deg C (46 deg F).

Tonight:
During the evening and overnight it will be largely cloudy with the risk of a few scattered showers at times. Local fog patches forming. Minimum temperature -1 deg C (30 deg F).

Monday:
Cloud thickening during the morning with a few showers. Heavy rain spreads across the region during the late afternoon and into evening with strengthening winds and coastal gales. Feeling milder. Maximum temperature 9 deg C (48 deg F).

Outlook for Tuesday to Thursday:
Remaining cloudy on Tuesday with outbreaks of rain at times. Cloudy with spells of rain, often heavy on Wednesday and feeling mild. Drier on Thursday with sunny spells.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.